SOCIAL COHESION
IN DIGITAL
TIMES

The Masaryk Democratic Academy, the Czech representation of the Friedrich-Ebert-Foundation and the Foundation for European Progressive Studies are jointly launching this high-level gathering in Prague, at the centre of Europe, to reflect about potential avenues to enhance European integration in the social sphere.

PRAGUE
EUROPE
CONFERENCE
2019

This third edition of the Prague Social Europe Conference will focus on the European actions, in terms of politics and policies, which are needed to properly manage the on-going digitalisation process that is transforming labour markets and also requiring updates in the education and welfare systems. The implementation of the European Pillar of Social Rights needs a coherent approach that keeps together national and European legislation providing rights and social protection to atypical and new forms of employment. Among other matters, also the financial backing from EU and national resources to uphold social outcomes all across Europe will be a subject of debate.

The European Pillar of Social Rights: Implementation or Stagnation?

After an ambitious start in autumn 2017, the European Pillar of Social Rights needs continuing efforts to secure its correct and prompt implementation. To avoid stagnation in the implementation process new energy and clear guidance are needed in all three large areas: 1) equal opportunities and access to the labour market,

2) fair working conditions, and
3) social protection and inclusion.
Sadly, calls for nationalism and authoritarianism or even welfare chauvinism are becoming more frequent and vocal. How shall we face those challenges and build the pillar more robust and ambitious?

Social protections for the digital transformation

The so-called digital revolution poses a series of challenges to the way in which we organise and regulate economic and social development in Europe.

Often, misleading terms such as “sharing economy” or “collaborative economy” hide under an appealing and modern cover, some old and worrying phenomena: workers’ exploitation, extreme precarisation of work, race to the bottom, etc.
How can the European Union and the new upcoming Commission facilitate the soft and fair landing of automation, robotization and artificial intelligence?

Liina Carr,

Confederal Secretary, European Trade Union Confederation

Lucie Studničná,

Bohemian-Moravian
Confederation of Trade Unions

Sacha Garben,

Permanent Professor of EU
Law, College of Europe
